Portfolio Manager Commentary

During the first six months of 2025, high interest savings account funds in Canada continued to offer investors a reliable vehicle for capital preservation and steady income amid ongoing macroeconomic uncertainty. The Bank of Canada (BoC) announced two rate cuts in the first few months of the year, bringing the overnight target rate to 2.75% in March¹, then maintained this level for the second consecutive announcement in June as global economic conditions continued to be mixed and tariff uncertainty remained high².

These policy adjustments reflected the BoC's balancing act between supporting a slowing economy and managing inflation that, while moderated, remained above the central bank's target. Inflation showed signs of easing, but risks persisted due to geopolitical tensions and supply chain disruptions.

Looking ahead, the macroeconomic outlook remains cautious. The BoC faces conflicting signals with inflationary pressures abating unevenly while growth concerns linger. The BoC's watchful stance signals readiness to respond as new data emerges³. Within a macroeconomic environment such as this, high interest savings account funds continue to offer investors a reliable source of monthly income and liquidity, supporting them through ongoing market uncertainty and safeguarding against the eroding effects of inflation.

Recent Developments

In 2025, trade tensions have escalated as the United States considers imposing new tariffs on key trading partners, including Canada and Mexico, along with broader reciprocal measures on other nations. In response, affected countries may enact retaliatory tariffs, further increasing uncertainty in global trade. These developments have contributed to heightened market volatility and could disrupt global supply chains, particularly impacting trade-sensitive sectors. The duration and full impact of these events remain uncertain, and as such, the financial implications for investments cannot be estimated at this time.

Related Party Transactions

Evolve Funds Group Inc. (the "Manager"), a corporation incorporated under the laws of the Province of Ontario, is the trustee, manager, and portfolio advisor of the Fund and is responsible for the day-to-day administration of the Fund. The Fund pays annual management fees to the Manager as consideration for its services. Any management fees paid to the Manager are related party transactions, as the Manager is considered to be a related party to the Fund. The management fees are disclosed in the statements of comprehensive income in the annual financial statements of the Fund and are discussed in greater detail below.
