Portfolio Manager Commentary

Bitcoin declined over the first half of 2026, with losses in both quarters.<sup>1</sup> Three developments shaped the sector: the macroeconomic conditions that weighed on the asset, a change in how the largest corporate holders managed their bitcoin, and the advance of United States crypto legislation.

The decline coincided with a stronger United States dollar, near a seven-month high, and a more hawkish Federal Reserve.<sup>1</sup> Over the second quarter, capital rotated toward semiconductor and memory-chip equities linked to artificial intelligence.<sup>1</sup>

Corporate treasury activity shifted during the period. In late June, Strategy adopted a capital framework that authorized it to sell bitcoin.<sup>2</sup> The framework permits the sale of up to $1.25 billion of bitcoin to fund a US-dollar reserve, along with further sales to support securities repurchase and stock buybacks.<sup>2</sup>

Crypto regulation progressed in the United States during the period. In mid-May, the Senate Banking Committee approved the Digital Asset Market Clarity Act, a bill to establish a federal regulatory framework for digital assets.<sup>3</sup>

Looking ahead, United States monetary policy and the strength of the dollar remained the macroeconomic factors most closely tied to the asset. The Clarity Act advanced to the full Senate, and the largest corporate holders now held the authority to sell bitcoin.

Recent Developments

In 2026, global financial markets have continued to navigate an environment characterized by elevated geopolitical risk, evolving trade policy, and shifting expectations for monetary policy. The ongoing military conflict between the United States and Iran has heightened geopolitical uncertainty, disrupting energy supplies and shipping routes and contributing to significant volatility in commodity and financial markets. At the same time, trade measures and related negotiations among major economies remain subject to change in scope and duration, while central banks continue to weigh inflation dynamics against the need to support economic growth. Together, these developments have contributed to periodic volatility across asset classes, particularly in sectors sensitive to energy prices, interest rates, currency movements, and global supply chains. The ultimate course and impact of these developments remain uncertain, and accordingly, the potential financial implications for investments cannot be reliably determined at this time.

5 Management expense ratio ("MER") is based on total expenses plus harmonized sales tax (excluding distributions, commissions and other portfolio transaction costs) for the stated period and is expressed as an annualized percentage of daily average net asset value during the period.

6 The trading expense ratio represents total commissions and other portfolio transaction costs expressed as an annualized percentage of average daily net assets during the period.

7 The Fund's portfolio turnover rate indicates how actively the Fund's portfolio manager trades its portfolio investments. A portfolio turnover rate of 100% is equivalent to the Fund buying and selling all of the securities in its portfolio once in the course of the period. The higher the Fund's portfolio turnover rate in a period, the greater the trading costs payable by the Fund in the period, and the greater the chance of an investor receiving taxable capital gains in the period. There is not necessarily a relationship between a high turnover rate and the performance of a fund.

Past Performance

The performance information does not take into account sales, redemption, distribution, income taxes payable by any unitholder or other optional charges that, if applicable, would have reduced returns or performance. The performance information shown assumes that all distributions made by the investment fund in the periods shown were reinvested in additional securities of the investment fund. How the Fund has performed in the past does not necessarily indicate how it will perform in the future.
